WILSON CHEERED BY HALF MILLION PAGEANT OF INAUGURATION UNROLLED IN UNPARALLELED SPLENDOR

CEREMONY DELAYED HOUR

Senator Poindexter's Flibuster on Appropriation Bill Holds back Oath-Taking

(Associated Press Cable)
WASHINGTON, March 4.—Woodrow Wilson, twenty-eighth president of the United States, took the oath of office this morning, in the presence of a vast crowd that filled the steps of the capitol, overflowed into the plaza, and packed Pennsylvania avenue for blocks. Never in the history of the nation has such a crowd turned out for the inauguration of any president, and the weather gods smiled, a trifle grimly, it is true, but still they smiled, on the event.

But one single hitch disturbed the even tenor of the ceremonies. Senator Poindexter's filibuster against the appropriation bill in the upper house held up the inauguration of the vice-president for 34 minutes, and the following ceremony of President Wilson's swearing in, by more than an hour and a half. But this was the only untoward event of the day, and the ceremonies moved forward to the end without further delay or interruption.

The weather was cold, and the day dull, with overcast skies, but the temperature was never lower than 50 degrees, and the absence of the usual March winds kept the crowd from feeling the chill as much as at former inaugurations.

It was shortly after seven o'clock when President Wilson left his room at the Shorsham hotel, where both he and Vice-President Marshall spent the night. He had been up half an hour and had shaved himself with a steady hand, and showed a fresh and smiling face when he turned up for breakfast, and afterward when he received the newspaper correspondents.

After breakfast, with the correspondents and a party of relatives and guests, he awaited the coming of President Taft and his party. There was a deal of good natured bantering between the president-elect and the president and members of both suites when the start was finally made for the capitol.

After a moment spent in the president's room at the capitol, the entire party went to the senate chamber to watch the inauguration of Vice-President Marshall. As they entered the chamber Poindexter's filibuster was in full cry, and the hands of the clock crept around closer and closer to the hour when the senate would cease to be without any apparent let up in the fight on the appropriation bill.

It was more than half an hour after the time set for the administration of the oath to the vice-president before the president pro tem of the senate announced that the upper house was ready to acclaim its new head. In the meantime both the president and the president-elect had been patiently waiting. Neither of them evinced any impatience, although Mr. Marshall showed an occasional sign of nervousness. It took longer than was expected to finish the ceremonies attending the inauguration of the vice-president and it was an hour and a half after the time set for the inauguration of Mr. Wilson before he appeared on the grand stand, accompanied by President Taft and his party. But the crowd had waited patiently, the silence broken frequently by cheers.

CENTRAL FIGURES IN IMPRESSIVE "DAY OF DAYS" AT THE NATION'S CAPITAL

50,000 IN LINE OF MARCH

Thirty Thousand Military and Twenty Thousand Civilians
on Pennsylvania Avenue

(Associated Press Cable)
WASHINGTON, D. C., March 4.—A half million spectators today saw fifty thousand men march in review before the nation's chief executive, in the most brilliant inaugural parade that Washington has ever seen. Thirty thousand troops and 20,000 civilians were in line, and as the column threaded its way up Pennsylvania avenue, the glitter of the uniforms and the splendid appearance of men and mounts led to a general verdict that the superlative in military display had been reached by those who did honor to President Wilson.

While the President was still at the inaugural luncheon, the various organizations that composed the grand pageant were forming on Pennsylvania avenue, and when he was ready to take his place in the parade, the column, of which Major General Leonard Wood was grand marshal, was ready to move.

With military promptness and the precision of a smoothly running machine, every detail of the inaugural parade was carried out as planned in advance. Military and civilian organizations by the score, mounted and on foot, marched in the column, and well before the appointed hour the troops were forming on the side street and debouching into the avenue as their place in the column was reached. Full dress uniforms were worn by every military organization, and those who had witnessed great foreign military displays compared today's parade favorably with them in the matter of pomp and impressive military splendor.

W. J. BRYAN AND CLARK ARE CHEERED

(Special Star-Bulletin Cable)
WASHINGTON, D. C., March 4.—William Jennings Bryan and Champ Clark were both prominent figures during the inauguration ceremonies here today, both shaking hands heartily with the new president and wishing him the best of luck in his high office.

At the house session, Clark was cheered to the echo when he declared to the congressmen there assembled: "I could have been sworn in as vice-president but preferred to remain with you."

ESCAPED CONVICT RODRIGUES CAUGHT

Dressed in the garb of a laborer, handcuffed, and making many pretenses of penitence, Antonio Rodriguez sat in the office of High Sheriff Henry this morning, and freely told of his wanderings over the hillsides of Honolulu's environs, with the hope of finally eluding the dragnet spread for his capture by officers connected with the territory as well as the city and county.

Antonio Rodriguez finds himself again a prisoner. With but 84 hours of dearly bought liberty to his credit, the thrice escaped prisoner of the territorial jail was captured before 1 o'clock this morning, his arrest being effected through the cleverness of Mounted Police Officer David Kaohi of Eva district, assisted by Manuel Soares and Manuel Baptiste, two gentlemen in the employ of L. L. McCandless.

On a county highway, approaching Aiea, having descended Puukali hill, Rodriguez, wearing through long hours of watchfulness, was plodding in the wake of a herd of cattle then being driven to Ewa, when he was overtaken by Officer Kaohi.

Priest, Armed, Puts Up Fight.
Kaohi was riding along on his horse when he overtook the party of cowboys and their drove. He happened to flash a light upon the pedestrian following in the rear of the cattle and thereupon met with the surprise of his life. The police officer at once recognized in the dust-stained pedestrian the much-wanted Rodriguez. He called to the cattleman and, descending from his horse, he engaged in a hand to hand struggle with the fugitive. With the timely assistance of Soares and Baptiste, Rodriguez was finally sent to the ground, his arms pinned behind him, a lariat wrapped about his legs, and then he was thrown across a horse and taken to the home of Deputy Sheriff Fernandez at Ewa.

Here the officers got in touch.

Manager A. M. Nowell's records show that 47,300 tons of sugar were shipped by the Sugar Factors' Company in the month of February, making the total of shipments to February 28 inclusive, 108,000 tons.

Of this quantity 73,000 tons were shipped east and 35,000 tons to the Pacific Coast. There has arrived at market 71,500 tons of this season's crop, the balance being afloat.

Up to the end of February last year the shipments amounted to 116,000 tons, compared to which this year's shipments are 7300 tons short.

RAPID TRANSIT ANOTHER CLASH CABINET TO BE ASKS LONGER FRANCHISE OF U. S. AND MEXICANS ANNOUNCED TOMORROW

(Associated Press Cable)
DOUGLAS, Ariz., March 4.—Another clash of Mexicans and U. S. troops has occurred here. Last night Mexican federal troops at Agua Prieta fired upon the border patrol of the Ninth cavalry at a distance of 250 yards. The border guards returned the fire and the Mexicans were quickly repulsed, retreating to their trenches across the line. The situation is growing in tension.

SENATE
Eleventh Day
Fathered by Senator Chillingworth, the long expected bill, increasing the length of the franchise held by the Honolulu Rapid Transit & Land Company came before the senate this morning, in the guise of S. B. No. 53, and passed first reading by title. The bill is comparatively brief, but in a short space it would make many important changes in the existing law.

In the first place it provides that the franchise be extended to July 1, 1950, with the understanding, however, that the territory or any "political division thereof, within or including the island of Oahu," be entitled to purchase the company's property at any time after January 1, 1940, by act of legislature.

SENATE ACCEPTS CLEGHORN'S GIFT

By a vote of fourteen to one, the territorial senate this morning voted to accept the gift of the late Archibald Scott Clegghorn, of Kaulaia park, with all the terms made by the will of the late governor.

But one vote was cast against the measure. Senator Chillingworth, after voting kanahua on the measure, changed his vote after all others had voted and registered a loud "No." Senator Wirtz was also a trifle undecided in his mind and gave the clerk another chance to call his name before he finally decided to vote in the majority.

The measure will now go to the house for passage and approval. There was little or no discussion of the measure this morning, the senators seemingly having made up their minds.

MURDER RUMOR STRONGER
Major Cardenas of the rural guard, commander of the escort of the late President Madero and Vice-President Suarez when the two men were killed, has been promoted to the regular army officers' position. This act of Huerta strengthens the suspicion that the escort fixed the trap that resulted in the murder of Madero and his ally.

SOLONS COMPROMISE ON NAVAL PROGRAM
(Associated Press Cable)
WASHINGTON, March 4.—In the hurry to rush through needed measures during the last few hours of the session, the house and senate today reached a compromise on the naval appropriation bill. But it was a compromise that left the house victor, for the measure as finally passed called for but one battleship.

APPROPRIATION MEASURE IS VETOED

(Associated Press Cable)
WASHINGTON, D. C., March 4.—In the last few moments of his administration, President Taft exercised the right of veto again. He refused to sign the sundry civil appropriation bill, carrying thirteen million dollars appropriations. The measure was rushed back to the house, and passed over the president's veto in the house but failed in the senate. The bill included an appropriation of half a million dollars for the Panama Canal Exposition in 1915.

FISHMARKET TO KNOW FATE

The fate of the fish markets on King street will be decided this afternoon at a meeting of the committee, consisting of Dr. J. S. B. Pratt, Attorney General W. W. Thayer and Mr. A. R. Keller, appointed several weeks ago to investigate conditions. The committee has made several trips of inspection to the district and will endeavor to determine whether the markets are in such an unsanitary condition as to make it imperative that they be destroyed completely, or whether by the enforcement of proper sanitary precautions, such as the removal of garbage, the installation of drains, etc., the fish markets can be allowed to continue in business. The committee will also discuss the advisability of substituting for the markets a municipal market, under the direct control of the authorities of the city and county. This plan has been tried with success in other cities and it will be considered in detail at the meeting this afternoon. The movement to investigate the fish markets was begun by the health committee of the board of city and county supervisors and it was upon their recommendation that the markets were inspected.

MILITARY PARADE IS ACME OF BRILLIANCE

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 4.—Today's military pageant is declared by veteran observers to be the greatest in the history of the national capital, the most brilliant ever seen in America.

Thirty thousand men, the pick of the nation, marched behind Woodrow Wilson down Pennsylvania avenue in a stirring parade such as moved even jaded Washington to enthusiasm.

Inaugural parades of the past have always thrown down the gauntlet to any other outpourings of the nation. Four years ago weather conditions abridged the demonstration. Not for eight years has Uncle Sam had an opportunity to show what he can do along these lines when he lets himself out. And the strength and vitality of the nation has increased wonderfully in eight years.

And the military is the backbone of this great parade. When President Taft was inaugurated there were 20,000 men in line. Of these 25,000 were from the military branches of the government.

Among the men in line was a battalion of engineers, wise men of the army; grizzled infantrymen who have known many campaigns; coast artillerymen who fire the fifteen-mile guns; crack cavalry troops that perform the "monkey drill"; youngsters from West Point and Annapolis, militia organizations that are the pride of various states; field artillery, signal corps, ambulance, halting civil war veterans, boy scouts, cadets from scores of military schools. The grandest of dress uniforms produced a blaze of color. A hundred bands played martial music. A hundred thousand pretty girls stood tiptoe with heart-flutter while they passed.

Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, chief of staff of the army, is grand marshal of the day. It is under his direction that all arrangements have been made for the military features for the parade. His chief marshal, Maj. Gen. W. W. Wotherspoon, was actually in command of the column in march.

Of the parade taken as a whole, there were four grand divisions. These were the army and navy division, which came first; the division of organized militia and military schools, under Brig. Gen. A. L. Mills, forming second; third appeared the division of veterans' organizations, and finally came the civic organizations, which completed the parade.

Police in Advance.
When the parade wound down Pennsylvania avenue shortly after noon today the first thing seen by the waiting thousands was a squadron of mounted police, which rode in advance to make sure that the avenue was clear. Immediately behind these
